"Most of the military companies who visited like mend, to participate in the inaugural ceremonies of the 22d, have left for their homes, after a brief sojourn in the capital of the Old Dominion. If they were not gratifies with their trip, it was not because our citizens did not de sire to give them a cordial and enthusiastic welcome Some of them, we feel assured, were not entertained as they would have been but for the thousands of strangers who also had claims upon our hospitality, and who had to be provided for in some manner. If any of them feel that they fared roughly, let them copeat their visit at an-other time, and we know that amends will be made of the most satisfactory character."

esterday an account of the execution of the negress Jer, convicted of the murder of her mistress, Mrs. Halader circumstances of particular brutality:

under circumstances of particular brutality:

The execution was performed in the jail yard by Sheriff Saugster. The scaffold was built of four uprights ranged in a square, two of which supported a cross-beam, beneath which was a platform, pierced by a trap-door. On this door the criminal was placed, and at the signal the supports to the door were withdrawn, and it fell through, leaving her suspended by the neck. Her struggles were almost superhuman while in the air.

Previous to her execution, the last rites of the Catholic Church were administered to her, and she died resignedly. Just before she was executed, and while in her cell, whe protested her innocence. There was an immense hy. Just before she was executed, and while in her coil, she pretested her innocence. There was an immense crowd outside and on the jail wall. The Mount Vernon Guards were under command, but there was no riot or disturbance. The law of the State of Virginia limits the number of spectators allowed within the jail walls to twelve, including a physician and ministers of the Gospel.
